About this course

Are you interested in psychology and want to learn more about it? Then this Psychology - Introduction course in Canterbury is for you.

This short course is a basic introduction to Psychology and Psychological theories. It will introduce psychology and discuss and compare key concepts and research methods.

It will include: Developing awareness of psychological methods; the findings of key psychological methods; the ideas of influential psychologists including Freud, Pavlov, Piaget and Darwin; the development of psychology from a historical perspective and its future; designing your own experiment.

There is no additional work between course hours.

There is limited parking on site, but there is a public car park nearby and on-street parking.

Who this course is for Anyone with an interest in Psychology. Students will need to: Understand the potential benefit from the programme of study. Read and interpret tasks. Communicate responses that are clear, logical and understandable. Manage their own time.

Course Information

How will I be taught?

The course will consist of a mixture of tutor input, group activities and discussion. The emphasis will be on participation and sharing of ideas. If you have a disability and think it may affect your learning in the classroom, or using any of our other services, please speak to us in confidence as soon as possible. We will discuss options with you and do our best to provide the support you would like.

Initial assessment will be carried out at the beginning of the course to assess individual skill level. Each student's starting point will be recorded on an Individual Learning Plan (ILP) and targets will be set. This will be revisited from time to time during the course to monitor and record progress. Tutors will give written or verbal feedback.

About the tutor

Our tutors are very experienced in their field, are trained to teach adults and are committed to ensuring that students enjoy their courses with Kent Adult Education. Each tutor strives to create a relaxed and informal atmosphere where students can work at an appropriate pace. Teaching methods are varied, and incorporate many styles including group work, pair work, some individual work and in some cases self study. Tutors are able to adapt their delivery to enable students to achieve their full potential. If you have a disability and think it may affect your learning in the classroom, or using any of our other services, please speak to us in confidence as soon as possible. We will discuss options with you and do our best to provide the support you would like.

What do I need to bring with me?

Pen, paper and folder. We advise students not to purchase equipment, books or materials until after the first session of the course unless otherwise stated.

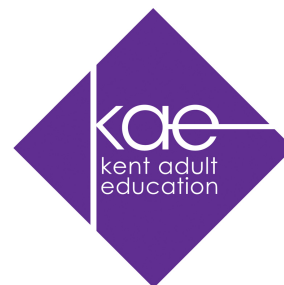

How will I know how well I am doing?

Initial assessment will be carried out at the beginning of the course to assess individual skill level. Each student's starting point will be recorded on an Individual Learning Plan (ILP) and targets will be set. This will be revisited from time to time during the course to monitor and record progress. Tutors will give written or verbal feedback.

What can I do next?

The course would be a useful starting point for anyone considering studying Psychology at GCSE or AS level. Your tutor will advise you on the appropriate follow-up course. Enrol early as places cannot be guaranteed.

We want to ensure that everyone feels welcome, valued and respected in our centres and on our courses, in line with our commitment to the community to promote British Values, Prevent, Equality and Diversity and Safeguarding in all we do.
